This Week in Wabash

Hello, Wabash,

Happy Monday. I hope your week has gotten off to a great start. Yesterday, the sun was shining, but my goodness it was cold. It was one of the deceptively nice days which coaxes you outside with the sun shining down and then hits you with the cold temperatures once you're out there. The sun is shining once again today, but at least it's a bit warmer. And the forecast for later on this week looks even better. I can't wait for spring, personally.

As I did last week, this week, I would like to ask for your help with an upcoming special section our newspaper group is working on. It's called "Hearts for Healthcare." The special section doesn't print until next month, but I wanted to get a jump on things as soon as possible. This is where you come in.

The basic idea is to celebrate the healthcare workers in our community who go above and beyond the call of duty. Is there someone you know who comes to mind? Please let me know.

This has, of course, been an extraordinarily stressful time to work in such an industry. The COVID-19 pandemic has set everyone back, but those working in healthcare have been on the front lines from the beginning. Of course, if the story I end up writing focuses on the virus or something related to it, that would make perfect sense. However, I am also open to considering other possibilities if a better idea presents itself. Brainstorm and be sure to reach out to me if something comes to mind.

Well, that's all I have for you today. I hope you have a great rest of your week.

Best,
Rob
